... Events

"... Education in the best sense can neither be isolated from nor insulated against the contemporary world scene. The college community is a learning and serving community in vital relation to the total world community. We are not spectators watching in safe seclusion the events of our day that are shaping our tomorrow. We are participants with responsibility measured by our mental ability, spiritual insight and moral character.

So let us all today, students and faculty and administrative staff, dedicate our best efforts to the greatest possible realization of our potential in the service of the highest good."

DR. HAROLD W. TRIBBLE
Convocation Address, Sept. 22, 1964

of Our Day That Are Shaping Our Tomorrow . . .

Political Haymaking: a Nation Chooses

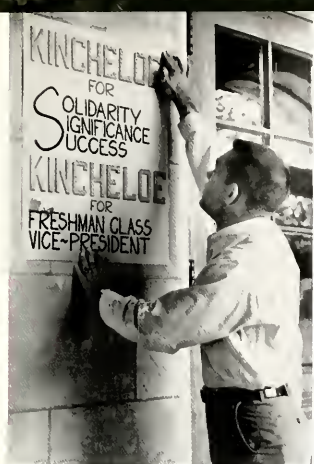

Kincheoes may come, and Kincheoes may go: it's all a part of the process that lies at the heart of American government. Wake added its voice to the 1964 electoral hubbub with pretty smiles and pointed gestures. All culminated in the Mock Election — for many, the last “dry run” before the responsibility of real choice would pass on to their generation.

Civil Rights turmoil breaks loose in Birmingham, Alabama, as Negro demonstrators are driven back by fire hoses.

The graduation of Ed Reynolds, senior of Ghana, was a quiet revolution of its own on Wake's leafy Plaza. Since that June day in 1961, others have come to this Southern Baptist campus to prove the potential of peaceful integration. Through the broadly mixed discussion groups of the Council on Human Rights and the natural mingling of youngsters in Coach Leighton's tennis program, educators and educated alike saw the new spirit of understanding and equality find its proper place in the realm of higher learning.

The Ever-Widening World of Entertainment

Grandpa toiled from sunrise till sundown and didn't know the meaning of "leisure time." But today, with less labor and more laborers to do it, shorter work weeks have created a bright new void for entertainment to fill. With a host of pursuits bidding for the leisure of a young nation, Wake embraces the entertainers-to-be as well as the ever-present audience that finds a timeless magic in the flavor of a fair.

Communist-Capitalist tension kept the United States hovering at the edge of war in Southeast Asia once again in '65. Wake's Army ROTC felt the push in increased training for combat conditions; anxiety showed through in an overflow crowd at the Coffee House forum on Viet Nam. Watchfulness was the reigning mood as Wake's handful of the nation's youth soberly realized that any new day could bring the sudden shipping-out.

Technical Progress “Pro Humanitate”

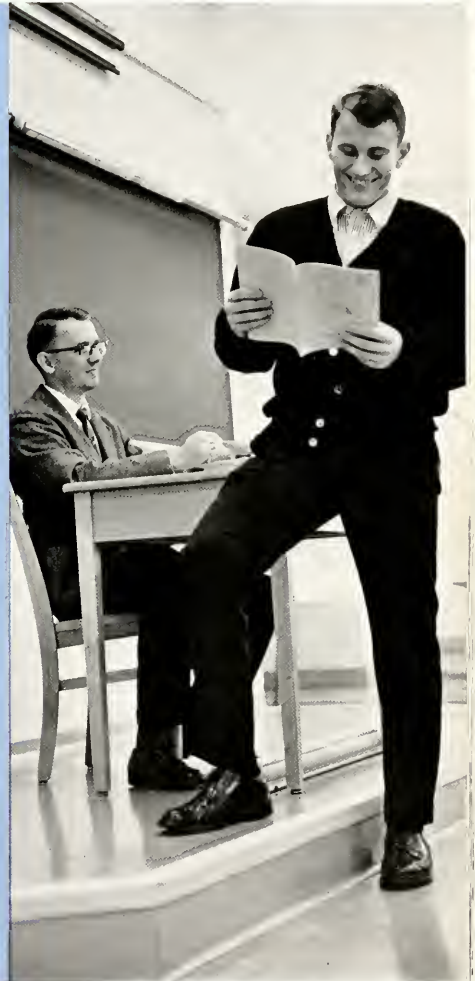

Although the splitting of the atom has intensified the rear threat, the vast majority of scientists still strive to improve the lot of mankind. As NASA pushes toward the moon, pressure is put on colleges to do their part in the scientific quest. Through research in biochemical processes, computer programming, and the tracing of atomic movement through solids, Wake contributes to the national effort for technological supremacy—but holding always foremost the principle of “Pro Humanitate” and the human benefits that must be technology’s goal.

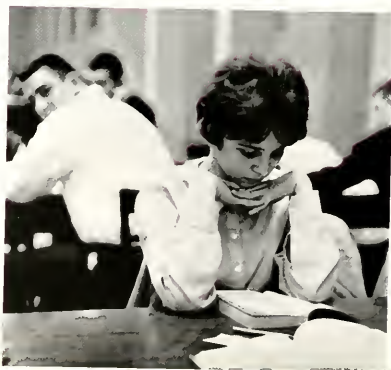

*Space Travel, Civil Rights, and South Viet Nam are today posing problems never confronted by past generations of students. With education as the key to this challenge, the professor must instill in each learner a desire for exploration and respect for the potency of his STUDIES

Announcement of a quiz is an effective catalyst in the learning process at Wake Forest. Library facilities, bull sessions, and plain old study are called into action in preparation for the inevitable Bluebook, with that occasional B-plus making it all worth the struggle.

Registration's Aftermath: A Withdrawal to Study

The bustle and confusion of registration is the inevitable beginning to each new semester. But after the last 1-TTS has been exchanged for 4-MWF, the last gruesome identification picture taken, and the last armload of books bought, the campus settles down to normal. Students get down to the real business of college as the academic routine takes over once again.

The Never-Ending Effort Toward a Twofold Ideal

While the earliest student is still giving his alarm clock that third groggy kick, his professors have already shaved, dressed, kissed their wives good-bye, and reported to their offices. As they grab a quick cup of coffee with their colleagues and students hurry to class, another day of lectures, quizzes, and in-class themes gets under way. The calm of night contrasts with the activity of day and brings an opportunity to reflect on the purpose of education at Wake Forest: a uniting of the religious and the secular in a striving for the highest in both.

President Exemplifies Devotion to WFC

After the Founder's Day program on Chapel, Dr. Tribble chats with guest speaker Dr. Robert Holt.

Many rich and flowery phrases can be aptly used in a description of Dr. Harold Tribble. But somehow they all fail to capture the simple warmth and dedication of Wake Forest's president. Everything he does, from his friendly smile for even the lowliest freshman to his untiring efforts to bring Wake to university status, shows his deep and personal interest in the College and its students. Undergraduates and alumni alike can be assured that, when all else fails, Dr. Tribble is "on their side," helping both them and their alma mater to find their place in the world.

President Tribble rushes to make another appointment on his typically busy schedule.

Administrative Decisions Shape Campus Life

Assistant Dean Robert Dyer shares his prize-winning roses with an admiring student.

The student seldom realizes that many aspects of his daily life — down to his chapel seat number and not walking on the Plaza grass — are results of decisions by the administrative officers. To these men and women falls the task of coordinating the internal workings of the College with the demands of the outside world. Their concerns are vast and in the execution of their numberless duties they are called on to be executives, leaders, innovators, and politicians. To these complex positions they bring varied talents and interests, but all have the common quality of dedication to Wake Forest College.

HONORS

During an Honors break, Dr. Richard Zuber answers Mike Anderson's questions on the political theories of Ben Franklin.

For those who ponder the political implications of Darwinian evolution or wonder just why Shelley Berman makes people laugh, Wake has established the Interdisciplinary Honors Program. Its purpose is to fill in the gaps of the regular curriculum by offering courses that cut across departmental lines. Honors students have the chance to explore such comprehensive topics as Darwinism, The Comic View, and The Ideal Society. These classes are conducted as seminars with students and professors contributing equally to the discussions. This approach has proved valuable in giving students a sharper perspective on universal themes and in stimulating deeper individual thought.

Seminar Approach to Universal Themes

Honors students enjoy the use of their own library, which is stocked with books supplementary to their course study.

Since Honors courses are based on individual reports, careful attention to each student's presentation is essential to the grasping of the new all topics.

Dr. Perry treats his wife to a night out at the new coffee shop.

A survey conducted this winter tried to determine the characteristics of the "typical" Wake Forest student. Results showed that no such stereotype exists. This is not surprising when one considers the wide variety of interests on campus. In the social studies departments alone, there are "types" ranging from stoic philosophy students to "sharper"-than-you-think religion majors. Future archaeologists enjoy polishing age-worn artifacts while would-be politicians get in shape for the diplomatic circle at fraternity parties. In the History Department, one of Wake's largest, one finds harrassed student teachers, GS-9 hopefuls, and worldly pre-law students. Although their ambitions differ, all history majors are united in their struggle with yearly departmental term papers and in the grasping of ideas and concepts which lie behind all historical events.

Research in the stacks, though often a trying experience, is a necessary part of the social studies curriculum.

This year was the last of teaching for Dr. A. C. Reid. Past and present generations of Deacons will always remember him for his profound insights into philosophy and his demeanor as a fine Christian gentleman.

The '64 elections saw political science majors taking time out from their studies of comparative government and international affairs to participate in American politics at the "grass roots" level.

Philosophy majors frequently spend their time in dormitory bull-sessions debating the merits of valid inference, epistemology, and Spinoza.

Not to be out-done, religion majors argue that a humble belief in Jesus Christ is not incompatible with the study of such subjects as geology, physics, and Salinger.

Sociology Encompasses Family of Man

During the course of one semester the sociology major may find himself studying Chinese poetry, the Hunc-Papa-Sioux Ghost Dance, and social deviation statistics — plus doing volunteer social work in East Winston. All these activities reflect an interest in people and their way of life — an interest which all have, but which the sociology student must develop to an especially high degree. In his study of cultures past and present, the sociologist seeks to find the “what” of man’s existence by delving deeper into the “why” of the social being.

To Learn by Teaching Is Student Teacher's Task

The field of education is one of the largest and most influential in our modern world. It is the professional educator who trains all of the country's future citizens, whether they be scientist, salesman, plumber, or president. Wake's student teaching program gives future educators valuable experience through on-the-spot training. Each teacher-to-be is assigned a high school class for which he must work out lesson plans, arrange visual aids, prepare, administer and correct tests. Although the responsibility is his, he works under a more experienced teacher who helps him "learn the ropes." On-campus courses prepare the student for his practice teaching and his future career.

This fall Wake hosted a student tutorial conference sponsored by the N. C. Intercollegiate Council for Human Rights.

Because unexpressed ideas are powerless, man must develop his powers of communication. He relies most heavily on the spoken word, but there are times when mere vocal expression is woefully temporal. Before the past can be used as a guide for the future, it must be preserved, and it is the purpose of literature to insure this preservation. A world without trace of Homer, Virgil, Chaucer, or Shakespeare would be a much poorer world indeed. Students of English and the classics realize this and strive not only to understand the old masters, but to learn from them the secret of enriching the lives of future generations.

Language: Key to World Harmony

With international tension mounting every day, the study of foreign languages becomes increasingly important. Through linguistic contact with other peoples comes the understanding which is sorely needed in today's world. At Wake there is an opportunity to learn French, Spanish, German, Russian, and Hindi. Many Deacons are inspired to pursue their language studies, with hopes of eventually becoming U.N. interpreters, Peace Corpsmen, or Foreign Service officers. But whether a student continues past the required three years or not, he cannot help but benefit from his brief encounter with foreign cultures.

In March Dr. Stephen Gilman of Harvard spoke on "Cervantes and the Invention of the Novel."

Last-Minute Flurry Precedes Student Performances

If sounds are any indication of activity, there is always "something going" in the Speech and Music Departments. From the melodic tones of a contralto rehearsing for her senior recital to the shriekings of a flat-builder when hammer meets thumbnail in Stagecraft, there is always something to listen to. And this is, of course, the purpose of these departments—to make students capable of commanding the attention of the world's ears. Whether their specialty be instrumental or vocal music, drama, radio-television, or public speaking, students in these fields are concerned with making the best possible impression on their audiences. Moreover, they strive to supplement technical perfection with the intellectual and emotional insight necessary for any truly memorable performance.

Math majors and the numerical theories they study are also a part of this highly complex technological surge. Study of Animals Aids Understanding of Man Wake's campus menagerie is housed in Winston Hall, the beautiful natural sciences building donated to the College by the people of Winston-Salem. Here one can find such species as pink-eyed fruit flies, formaldehyde-soaked frogs, home-grown tardigrades, and maze-trained rats. In addition, there is a wide variety of students and professors who can be seen bustling from lab to classroom and back to lab again, checking control conditions, jotting down results, and comparing notes on experiments. Add to this quizzes and endless lab reports, and it makes for a rugged four years. But it brings the compensation of increased knowledge of all living things, a deeper understanding of the natural world, and a sound background for continued study of man's mind and body.

Shouts of "Hup-two-three-four" and strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" echo from the football practice field every Tuesday afternoon as Wake's ROTC cadets go through their paces in parade formation. In addition to weekly practice in precision marching, the cadets attend classes on military organization, tactics and techniques. The ROTC Cadet Corps is organized along the lines of a Regular Army unit to provide maximum opportunities for individual leadership, the purpose of this program being to prepare young men for positions as junior Army officers. This year, with the situation in Viet Nam quickly approaching the boiling point, emphasis has been placed on combat readiness. However, Sgt. Gibson soothed apprehensive senior cadets by advising that "it's harder to hit a man who can't walk a straight line."

A freshman girl who is forced to play field hockey in 29 degree weather may not be convinced of the value of an intense physical education program. But it is nevertheless true that a mind does not function well unless it is contained in a sound and vigorous body. It is the goal of the Physical Education Department not only to prove the importance of P.E. in the lives of students but also to insure the training of teachers in this multi-faceted field. In addition to basic courses, the department gives strong academic emphasis to programs for students planning to enter the field as a career. Some may joke about classes in basket-weaving and soap-carving, but P.E. majors know that fly-casting and scuba-diving aren't as "crip" as they sound - not to mention those inevitable courses in anatomy and physiology.

POST-GRADUATE STUDIES

Grad Students Challenged by Enormity of Task

Director of Graduate Studies, Henry S. Stroupe

For some, receiving their Bachelor's Degree is the finale to sixteen years of "book-learning." But for others it symbolizes just an intermediate rung in the ladder of higher education. Six of Wake's departments offer Master's Degrees which students can win after completing two years of classwork, extensive research, and that ominous thesis. The Division of Graduate Studies, now in its fourth year, hopes eventually to be able to offer M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s in all departments. Wake's School of Law, in contrast, is firmly on its feet. Law students are proud of their School's 71-year heritage and hope to uphold its high technical and ethical ideals throughout their lives. In preparing for the legal profession they spend long hours reading and preparing briefs of sample cases.

Graduate students ponder a controversial question in Dr. Sougy's Literary Criticism seminar.

While their liberal arts counterparts struggle with theses and bar exams, medical students learn how to diagnose beri-beri and remove gall stones. The Bowman Gray School of Medicine is Wake's training ground for future physicians. Founded in 1902, the Med School offers a Master of Science Degree in various fields in addition to the traditional M.D. Degree.

Research is an important facet of education at Bowman Gray, as it is on Wake's main campus across town. Both students and professors can be found doing work on most anything from atoms to zinnias. Their efforts are relentless and their ambitions high. Each new day could bring a breakthrough that would mean discovery—discovery of a means to greater knowledge and better living for future generations.

ODK, Tassels Earn Top Honors

Wake Forest College honor societies, characterized by students who have distinguished themselves in various aspects of campus life, seek to single out individuals who have exhibited outstanding performance in a particular academic field.

Tassels and Omicron Delta Kappa, honoraries for women and men, recognize campus personalities who have displayed exceptional versatility in college activities. At their tapping ceremony, the black gown is often conferred on an honorary faculty member.

Handshakes and congratulations are in order backstage for new ODK members.

Pub Row Sticks to Its Guns on Major Issues

Battle-scarred Pub Row once again held on to its title as the hottest spot on campus. The Student returned to sweep out the cobwebs and resume its position as the literary member of the three major publications. "Staff-stealing" was by far the most popular sport, with sneaky reconnaissance missions between Pub Row offices often resulting in guerilla warfare.

The Publications Board this year tackled the problem of indiscriminate ad-solicitation, and needled by Baptist objections throughout the state, took a firm stand on policies concerning "Beer Establishment" ads.

Reporting "all the news that's fit to print," the Old Gold and Black kept its pages alive with a weekly report on all events that directly concerned the College throughout the year. From taped telephone interviews with Baptist leaders to an investigation of the coed apartment rule, Old Gold reporters searched to locate the facts wherever they could be found—daring when necessary to trample "forbidden grounds." Editor Craven and her assistants took over a proud heritage of "All American" and Pacemaker fame and accepted the charge to continue the Old Gold's high standards of objective, factual reporting. Each issue of the paper was a separate entity, uncovering a new face, a new personality, the offspring of uncounted hours of clacking keys and toiling minds. For the Old Gold and Black mirrored the shortcomings and attributes of an intricate organization—Wake Forest College.

HOWLER

Finding a new angle on an old subject was the HOWLER staff's main concern in '65. The unique "Events of our day" theme called for unique photography and got it—despite the discouraging darkroom that was only big enough for three-fourths of a person, the enlarger that had to be propped up with a stick, and the student photographers who seemed to have some difficulty in distinguishing between the words "vertical" and "horizontal."

From the snapping of the first portrait in September to the typing of the last cut-line in March, the editor and staff pushed toward the completion of 304 pages worthy of the monk's-cloth cover that bound them.

A throng of Wake Forest students walked out of Chapel and filed in black and white across the cover of the November issue of the student. For the first time, three classes of students met the magazine "by and for Wake Forest students only." Guided by Dr. Edgar E. Folk, the student returned from a two year's exile to resume its place as the major outlet for artistic talent and creative writing. Typewriters, scissors, paste, and tempers flew, and things returned to normal on Pub Row.

Metal scaffolding and dust covers replaced students during the summer of 1963, as the chapel underwent a major renovation.

Student government, the voice of the student body in campus affairs, combined energy with a well-rounded program of activities in pursuit of its goal of effective representation. Perhaps its most perceptive reflection of student interest was mirrored in the discount card plan, allowing reduced prices for Wake Forest Deacons from local merchants. Another tangible achievement was the founding of the Coffee Shop, a long-awaited filler for the void of weekday campus life.

The Chapel Committee, striving for diversity in its bi-weekly programs, challenged the students with a variety of talent and thought.

Student Control and Trial Implement Honor Code

Organization and originality made orientation week in September 1964 enjoyable as well as informative. Under Neal Tate's direction, the Orientation Committee battled against "freshman-itis" with such convincing artillery as combo parties, hootenannies, and picnics. All was not play for the freshmen, however, for their week also included a barrage of placement tests. Time was allowed in the rush of activities for individual conferences with representatives of the Honor Council, who acquainted each new student with Wake's honor system.

The need has long been felt on campus for a governing body to make and enforce rules for the male students. Cases that would have previously been sent to the Executive Council are now directed to the Men's Judicial Board.

WOMEN'S GOVERNMENT

The image of a Wake Forest College coed is reflected not just on the campus, but in the community and in society as well. This thought serves as a guide for the Women's Government Association in all its legislative and judicial decisions. As the representative body of the women students, the WGA takes into account the attitude of the girls, seeking not to "legislate morality," but to encourage Wake coeds to conduct themselves with good taste. Like the Men's Judicial Board, the WGA makes its own decisions.

An advisory capacity is filled by the Dean of Women, Miss Lu Leake, who works in close communication with the WGA. A newcomer from the administration at Meredith College, Miss Leake has attempted to increase the responsibility of such smaller governing units as the Dorm Council system.

Progress and expansion typified the College Union's efforts in 1965 to provide the student body with a more widely diversified program. The success of these efforts was evident from the welcome acceptance of such innovations as the Valentine Dance, with reigning King and Queen of Hearts Ronny Watts and Karen Roberson. The small socials and travel committees produced memorable events like Ski Weekend and spring vacation in the Bahamas. Through concerts, symposia, lectures, movies, and art exhibits, as well as the special Homecoming and Magnolia weekends, the student body was exposed to such personalities as Roger Williams, Erskine Caldwell, and Miriam Makeba.

MUSIC AND DANCE

The Wake Forest band includes six different groups organized under the direction of Calvin Huber. Led by high-stepping majorettes, the Marching Deacons are a dynamic morale booster at all home football games. Their varied repertoire, including a tribute to Henry Mancini, entertained fans during half-time shows this year.

In November students auditioned for the concert band, which represented Wake Forest on a tour to Washington in the spring. Other groups include the varsity band, the pep band, the ROTC band, and the stage band.

The Chapel Choir, under the direction of Dr. Thane McDonald, sings at various chapel services during the year. Their twice-weekly practices are geared toward the Vespers Service at Christmas and the spring Magnolia concert.

Chorus members in a special section at the back of the balcony sing in unison to "Amen" to close the chapel service.

The Orchestra joined the Choir for its annual Christmas Concert and prepared a spring concert as part of Magnolia Week festivities.

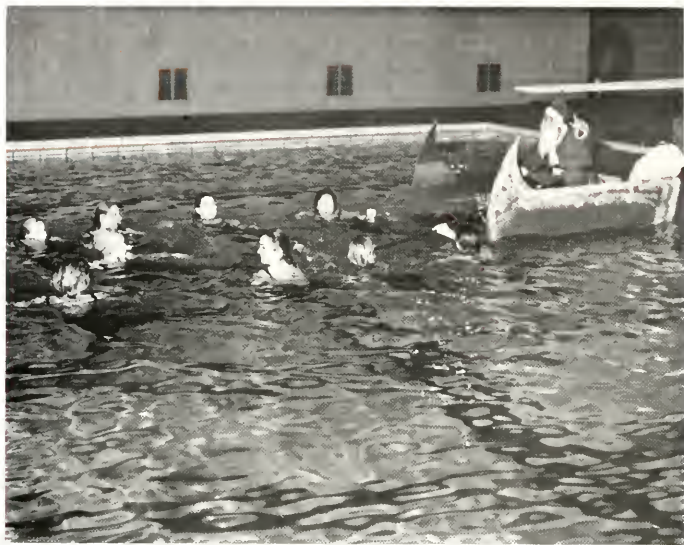

Singing acappella, the Madrigals presented programs of unusual Christmas songs, madrigals, and ballads. A trip to New Haven for a Renaissance festival highlighted the activities of the Elizabethan Singers, who wear period costumes while performing their Old English ballads.

The College debate team this year continued to live up to its ACC-championship record with fine performances in forensic competition. The debaters won many other awards throughout the country, including first place honors at Pittsburgh's Cross-Exam Tournament and at the Invitational of the University of Richmond.

Under the supervision of Dr. Franklin R. Shirley, the team had at least one team on the road almost every weekend, debating on the national topic, "Resolved: That the Federal Government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed."

The novice team also put on a very good performance at all tournaments, promising an excellent debate squad again next year.

To honor the late T. S. Eliot, WFDD presented a special program of "Murder in the Cathedral" with critical commentary by Dr. Robert Shorter of the English Department.

Innovation and experimentation marked the 1964-65 agenda for the College Theater. The Enchanted, the group's first play, temporarily transported a delighted audience to a mystical land where the dead came very much to life. Seven small children making their stage debuts added to the pleasure of this well-received fantasy.

The Lemmings, by Joseph Guzzetti, Jr. was one of the first original dramas ever staged at Wake Forest. The author himself was present for the rehearsals and presentations of the play.

LBJ Goes "All the Way" in '64 Landslide

One time in each student's four-year college career, a president is elected. Wake responded to the 1964 edition of this national phantasmagoria with suitable enthusiasm, Democrats extolling "The Great Society" and Republicans lauding individual freedoms as never before. Led by Dr. Mazor's unequivocal Volkswagen, campus cars sprouted stickers from bumper to bumper. Indeed, it was a bumper year for politics.

Pained and gleeful expressions betray the political affiliations of these late return-watchers.

Portent of the future: Vice-Presidential candidate Lyndon Johnson wins the coed vote during a 1960 campaign visit to Winston-Salem.

Young Democrats, led by President Larry Robinson, started early by nabbing freshmen during fall registration.

"Senator Goldwater is the man with the philosophy of victory and the flexibility to insure our freedom in the struggle with Communism."

"As college students, I think it is impossible for us to support Senator Goldwater because he is the exact antithesis of the active college student."

"I am not now and never have been an advocate of Civil Rights' Lyndon Baines Johnson, 1960. And you think Barry Goldwater is inconsistent?"

"... but there is a difference between the day-to-day vacillation of the Republican candidate and the admitted changes in the political philosophy of Lyndon Johnson."

... Although

Not to be outdone by the Gallup Poll, the Old Gold and Black conducted a survey of its own to determine the political sentiments of a student body varied in backgrounds and experiences. Preceding the Mock Election was a week of hectic activity by Young Democrats and Young Republicans, joined by a rather volatile YAF band.

Both candidates came under open fire during a Chapel debate session between the two opposing factions. Afterward, voting at the Reynolda Hall polls showed a total of 45% of the student body casting ballots. A Goldwater victory on campus was a surprising reversal to most, but not much consolation for the crushing defeat on the national scene.

At polls especially set up in Reynolda Lounge, Jim Carter and Caroline Spratt cast their ballots in the Old Gold and Black's traditional mock election.

RELIGION

The Baptist Student Union is an organization which seeks to relate the Christian faith to students within the academic community. Through its monthly supper forums, mission projects, vespers programs, and local and state-wide conferences, students are given an opportunity to become involved in a program of personal growth and service. Ed Christman, as BSU director, presents new ideas for the various BSU programs and is always ready to talk with students about their problems or just to pause for a friendly chat. Welcoming all students who are "seekers," the BSU attempts to provide an atmosphere of honest inquiry into the Christian faith along with a lively sense of fun and genuine fellowship.

Young Women's Auxiliary is an organization for coeds of any denomination. Monthly supper meetings place their major emphasis on missions and Christian service in the community.

Coeds Enjoy Competition of Intramural Sports

The Women's Recreational Association coordinates various women's intramural sports including basketball, volleyball, field hockey, singles and doubles tennis, and badminton. Women students majoring in physical education are given an opportunity to gain valuable professional training in the Women's Physical Education Club. The speakers at their monthly meetings come from such pertinent fields as physical therapy. Members referee, participate in, and manage intramural sports.

The Student National Education Association promotes interest in the field of teaching. The speakers and films making up the programs are geared to inform students of recent developments in the profession.

Panel discussions, speakers, and films give the members of the English Club an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the works of authors not covered in college courses. One of the highlights of this year's program was Allen Dougan's reading of his poetry.

Throughout the year, coeds on dorm and society teams participate in various tournaments organized by the Women's Recreation Association.

Future educators gain knowledge of various teaching materials through activities of the Student National Education Association.

Delta Kappa Nu initiated a personal finance lecture series for interested students and helped with the Management Seminar. Dimmer meetings with speakers from the Better Business Bureau and IBM stressed business opportunities for women. A banquet marked the initiation of new members into Beta Gamma Sigma, the honorary business fraternity.

Monthly meetings of the International Club consisted of social service and intellectual discussions of such topics as the Malaysian-Indonesian problem. Serving foreign students, the group works as a liaison between the college and the community.

Honorary faculty members and new inductees display the shield of this recently founded business fraternity.

Alpha Kappa Psi enjoys the distinction of being America's oldest and largest professional business fraternity. The Gamma Delta Chapter chartered at Wake Forest selects new members each year from the ranks of business majors. This year AKPsi was fortunate to initiate Dr. J. Van Wagstaff as a faculty member and chapter advisor.

To stimulate and develop the interest that the members hold in current business affairs, Alpha Kappa Psi sponsors various field trips and seminars covering the entire spectrum of commercial fields. This year members took two tours and heard speeches by such prominent men as Mr. O. A. Kirkman, president of H. P. T. & B. Railroad, Col. John Reed, Director of College Placement, and Mr. Billy Packer, insurance representative.

Delta Sigma Pi

Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity, was "founded to foster the study of business in colleges and universities."

Both semesters this year began with smokers, rushing, and finally pledging, with many new brothers initiated into the fraternity. Other events on the Gamma Nu activity calendar included industrial tours of Richmond, Reynolds Tobacco, Hanes Hosiery Mills, and Sealtest Dairy. Distribution of Career books to male seniors and graduate students, doughnut sales, and participation in intramural sports added to a well-rounded year.

With a memorable year behind them, many of the brothers are looking forward to attending the Grand Chapter Congress in the Bahamas this August.

Independents Cast Votes For Pretty Girls, Ugly Men

The Independent Council provides a channel through which independent students—both men and women—can express themselves collectively. Through floor managers on each floor in the dorms, the organization provides a direct channel from the individuals to the officers.

This year the IDC participated in the Ugly Man Contest, the Miss Baby Deac Contest, and Wake's first Homecoming Parade, as well as other events. The dorms also have organized intramural teams on which any athletic-minded Independent may participate. The Annual Talent Show rounded out the agenda.

Contestants from all ten fraternities started out strong in the fall Cross-Country race.

After several seasons of controversial discussion, the Interfraternity Council this year reached a final decision on the question of deferred rush. Acting upon faculty urging, the Council ruled out first semester rush of freshmen beginning next year. Although this arrangement is considered unsatisfactory by many because it will prohibit fraternity men from associating with freshmen except for certain events, the IFC agreed that it was in the best interests of those concerned.

In addition to the annual Greek Week and Midwinters festivities, the IFC this year planned and executed a March of Dimes collection that set a new record -$631.27 -of money collected on one day by one group.

Fraternity men and special guests dig in with gusto at the annual IFC Banquet.

Coeds Mary Sue Martelle, Mackie Coble, Pam Flack, Bonnie Walthal, and Karen Gill find that sitting down on the job isn't always so comfortable.

The addition of two new women's societies in the spring of 1964 and the adoption of a three-point program to boost campus and community projects brought this year's ISC many demanding, yet exciting challenges. "Tame the Tigers" was the theme for a Homecoming float, produced jointly by the five groups as the year's first activity.

Society members also helped with All-Parents' Weekend and joined with the Interfraternity Council for a vigorous March of Dimes campaign in Winston-Salem. Playing no favorites, in February the girls from each group pitted their prowess against the WTOB "Good Guys" in an exhibition basketball game to raise money for the Heart Fund.

A record number of 140 coeds went out for a hectic two weeks of rush, resulting in five enthusiastic new pledge classes and many blouses to iron.

Great Moments for Deacons in 1964-'65

A win over Maryland in football is always special; add one against Duke and you have a phenomenon that few Deacs ever experience. Basketball, normally the high point, fell a bit short. However, any year Carolina is beaten is a good one and a tournament win is ecstasy. The swimming team was boosted from the cellar to a fifth place ACC finish when Dretz Taylor took both diving events at the championships. Spring sports had a lot to live up to, since all four teams had winning marks in '64: despite finishing second in the ACC, the baseballers won the Florida State Tourney and posted a 23-7 overall record; to cap the year, Dennis Milne tied for the ACC golf title and the Deacs placed seventh in the nation.

Tackling . . .

Tate's tacklers were Wake's sweet in many years. Pursuit of Duke's quarterback was a strong factor in the upset no one thought could happen.

And it came to pass that on that day the Baptists defeated the Methodists. And all who were there to witness heard the Deacon cannon . . .

. . . Boom!

Five Upsets in One Season!

A season can be summed up in many ways, but for Wake Forest, why not just say, "satisfaction." It was a satisfying season for a coach in his first year. It was satisfaction for seniors who had experienced victory only once in two previous years. And it was satisfying, most of all, for students who were finally seeing Wake "Give 'em hell!"

It started with confidence. Coach Bill Tate, just arrived from the University of Illinois, told authorities Wake would have a winner "with or without your support." The next step was conditioning. Finally, there was old-fashioned work, the kind that could make a group of athletes learn an entirely new system.

Attention to fundamentals, tackling and blocking, had to pay off. Still, the horde of skeptics was surprised when the Deacs rolled over Virginia 31-21 in the opener.

Blocking . . .

Precision blocking made a basic offense go. Alternating pitch-outs and well-executed line plunges brought early wins over Virginia and VPI.

Kicking helped propel Piccolo to the position of top scorer in the nation.

Brian suffered his most frustrating day at North Carolina. But he ground out 59 hard-earned yards and gave tacklers as hard a time as ever.

Brian Piccolo:
Wake Forest's Version of "007"

This was not a one man team, but there was a special player on it. Brian Piccolo was as much a hero of intrigue as James Bond ever hoped to be.

There is nothing massive about Piccolo. He is solid and strong, but is no giant. Yet, he combines so many of the qualities that make the complete player that it is no wonder he was the nation's leading rusher and scorer.

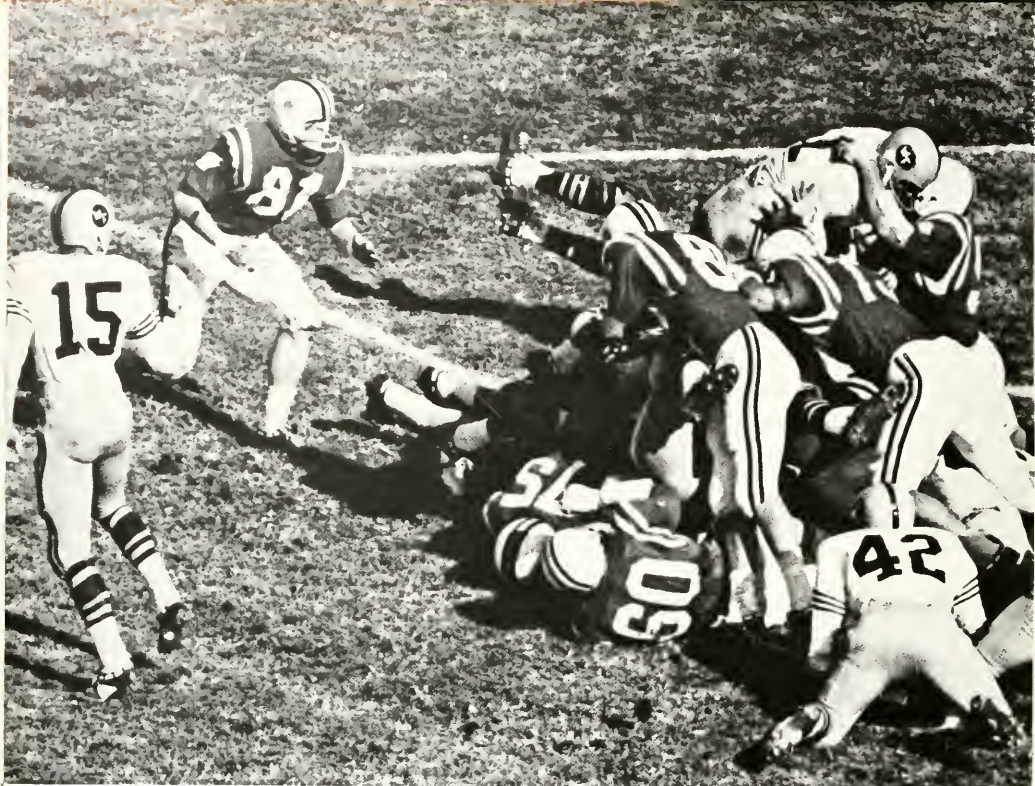

Wake's agent was no secret. He was a marked man in ten games, but finished the season as spectacularly as he started. He will be remembered for 20 points against Duke and, surely, for many to come in his career with the Chicago Bears.

Cuts as sharp as any halfback's were Piccolo's trademark. Often he made his own holes.

Post-touchdown congratulatory lines numbered 17 for Piccolo in 1961.

A most pleasant second half uprising gave the Deacs a sight-for-sour-eyes victory over Maryland. Down 14-0, Wake climbed back and held on for a 21-17 win before an unsympathetic College Park crowd.

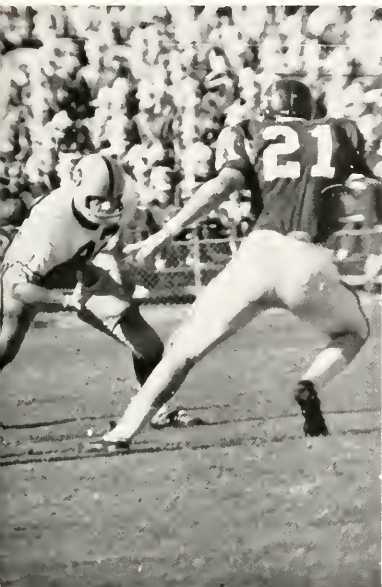

John Mackovic, after a stormy first two years, became one of the steadiest quarterbacks in the league. His arm won him the ACC total offense crown.

Virginia Tech was next. Still the underdog, the Deacons fell behind to the Southern Conference Champs. But an offensive show by Wayne Welborn and Brian Piccolo quieted the doubters and gave the Deacs a 38-21 victory celebration.

In the early games, Tate had concentrated on simplicity. But now his boys faced a true powerhouse. What to do? Extra spirit — "Beat Carolina" on the back of every player and even more simplicity on offense. It didn't work and UNC won 23-0, but the spirit and effort did not subside because of the loss.

A disheartening 9-6 defeat at the hands of Vanderbilt followed. Three field goals were all the Commodores could muster, but the sputtering Deacon offense was beginning to cause concern.

Senior John Grimes played steady defense, but added a refreshing surprise with his pass-catching antics.

Tate Fakes Forecasters: "We'll Win a Few"

No student body had more ecstatic moments to celebrate than ours after home victories over Duke and State.

The kicking game was the big factor against Clemson. But the Tigers got the best of the deal. Joe Blackwell of Clemson blocked Wayne.

Welborn's quick-kick for a touchdown. Then, as if to save face, Deac halfback Joe Caruso blocked the extra point attempt.

Teamwork on the bench and on the field kept spirit alive on otherwise bad afternoons.

A Handshake between two strong arms—triumph for a Deacon, despair for a Blue Devil.

Clemson demoralized Wake rooters by ruining Homecoming, 21-2. John Mackovic led an aroused offense to 341 yards, but could not cross the goal line. A startling upset over Maryland, 21-17, showed real talent as once again the team rallied from behind.

Powerhouse Memphis State didn't scare Wake Forest. Wake played on even terms with the Tigers, but finally fell 22-14.

Anyone who saw the Duke game Nov. 7 must have thought it was Wake who was favored. The Blue Devils never had a chance; putting together a fine offense with the best defense of the year, Wake broke the 13 year Duke jinx, 20-7.

The letdown of playing South Carolina was too great after the previous week's high point and the Deacs dropped one they would have liked to replay, 23-13.

But a season-ending smash of N. C. State, 27-13, was fitting for this team that fresh blood and new spirit built.

Plenty of Speed in

"A disappointing year," some say of the basketball season. True, 12-15 is not an outstanding record, especially in recent years. But no excuses are needed for this season's team. Wake had two genuine all-stars and another exciting player, who gave Deacon fans as many thrills as did the teams of the championship years.

From the start, Wake Forest was a running team, one that would rather use speed and hustle than precision and finesse. The Deacs ran hard against Davidson in the opener and lost. But there was promise in those 52 points scored by Ronny Watts and Bob Leonard and surprise in the 18 racked up by guard John Anderson.

Wake bounced back with a win over N. C. State. Leonard and Watts scored 22 each and sophomore Jim Boshart added 21. Later, this victory was appreciated more as unheralded State wound up 20-5.

Ronny Watts goes high—even for him—to shoot over Fred Hetzel in the opening game at Davidson.

a Frustrating Season

Ronny Watts: Perseverance Pays Off

Ronny Watts' selection as captain of the 1965 Deacons was an honor symbolizing the culmination of four years' hard work. Transforming himself from an inexperienced freshman to a standout senior, Watts raised the level of his own ability and inspired his teammates to do the same.

But the real tribute to Ronny Watts cannot be put in writing. His testimonial is the enjoyment he has given to those who watched him those four years, the enjoyment that comes from recalling the stages of his growth and admiring the finished product.

Whether the obstacle is six feet or seven feet, Watts can score over it.

It was close, but even a ref at Chapel Hill could see that Bob Lewis got Wake's John Anderson from behind.

Jim Alengarten, with his steady play, climbed into the starting line-up late in the season.

Hustle Brings a Lot of Layups

Watts has his hands full against St. Joseph's. But he's in control and the fast break is on.

The strain of the game—as captured in the expressions of Boshart, Anderson, Leonard, Watts, Altengarten, and Herring.

Wake seemed to be improving as the season progressed. Returning from the holidays with a 5-5 record, the Deacs put on their finest show of the season, walloping UNC 107-85.

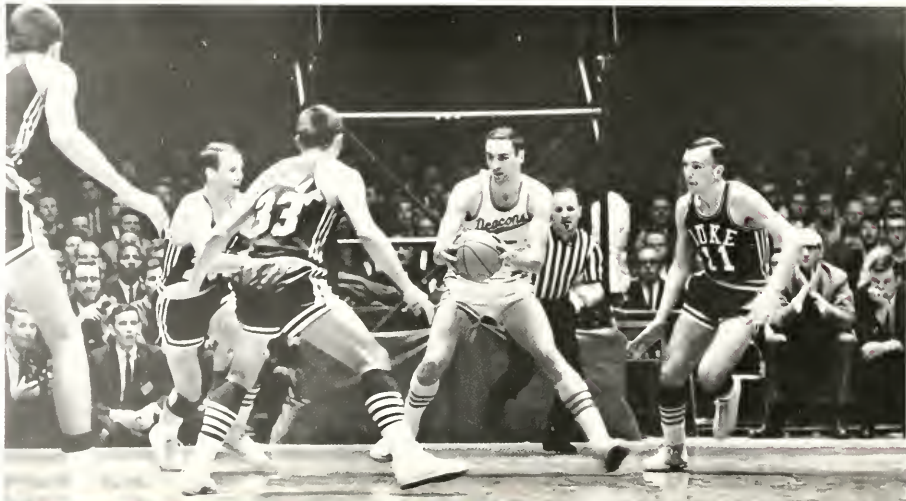

Two victories later, Wake lost a heartbreaking double overtime to Maryland that started the team into a skid in which they lost eight of nine games. No one counted Wake out, however, and the Deacs finished the regular season by winning two of their final three games.

The tournament, Bones' specialty, remained—and true to form, Wake provided excitement. A 54 point second half lifted them over UNC and into the semi-finals. Duke ended further dreams by beating Wake for the fourth time of the season—a reminder that nine of those 15 defeats were at the hands of Associated Press "Top Twenty" teams.

Anderson is calmed by the refs in the heat of the ACC Tourney's opening round.

Herring in Leonard is not good enough. His 33 points in the semifinal against Duke were 80% for the tournament.

It was a much calmer Bones McKinney fans saw this year.

SWIMMING

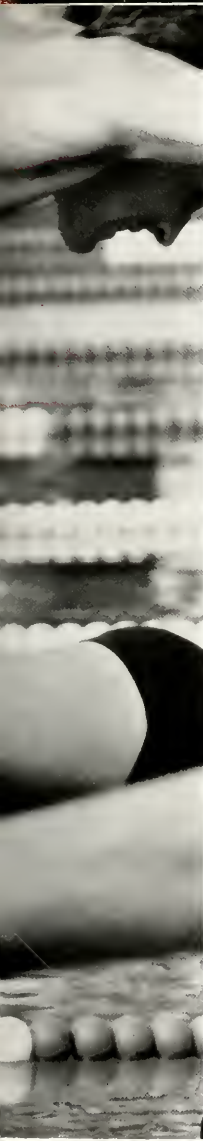

The Deacon swimming outlook was good when the team began practicing last fall. There were enough veterans and newcomers to predict a successful season. But before long, bad luck set in and Coach Ellison's crew never quite recovered. Injuries and drop-outs cut the team's depth and by the time of the A.C.C. Championships there were only five left to make the trip. The team did not quit in the face of misfortune. Led by captain Buck Jones, Rick Sedgely, and Eric Fruin the swimmers made a respectable showing against high calibre competition. For the second consecutive year, Drew Taylor was the one consistent scorer. Taylor took both league diving titles, singlehandedly securing for his team fifth place in the A.C.C.

'65 Club Has Tradition to Uphold

It would be hard to start from scratch and build a baseball team to contend for the ACC title. Hard, that is, unless Jack Stallings were the coach. Stallings lost eight of his nine starters via graduation last year and the other one signed a pro contract as a junior. All told, seven of last year's squad are now earning their bread by baseball. In 1965, Stallings chose 23 men to maintain the high ratings Wake Forest Forest always gets in the pre-season polls. Not one of them was a senior. And it was a different kind of team. Instead of power and defense, there was pitching.

Happiness is crossing home plate against Carolina.

Wake Forest: Stepping-Stone To a Pro Contract

Leading the mound corps were two sophomores, Bill Dillman and Steve Wrenn. Gerald Boyles anchored an infield manned in 1964 by three All-ACC players. The catching post was given to Dickie Myers, with the outfield built around a transfer student, Tommy Cole. Plunging into a demanding 27 game schedule, the Deacs were anxious to prove that hustle and determination are as important as big names. Also on the docket was the Florida State Invitational Tourney, a week-long event Wake won last season. A tough row to hoe, but Stallings had hoed it before.

Jack Stallings—the number one man in Wake Forest baseball.

Hop, Bulger, a "mite" behind two North Carolina hurdlers, called and won this race for the Deacons.

CROSS-COUNTRY

The cross-country team, consisting of only six runners, finished its season in fifth place in the conference. Paul Snell and Al Viehman, both sophomores and an inseparable duo, often finished in a dead heat. Both broke the Wake Forest home course record and took many overall firsts and seconds. A lack of other high finishers cost the team dearly.

TRACK

The track team continued to improve as more participants flocked to the cinders. There were 29 men in uniform and the new-found depth was most welcome to Coach Bill Jordan. Besides the 100-yard dash, 200, and intermediate hurdles manned respectively by tri-captains Dick Dunlap, Rick Hartley, and Pat Neary, Wake was especially strong in the two mile run, 120 high hurdles, triple jump, high jump, pole vault, and discus. The indoor season helped to prep the team for its largest home schedule, but lack of a board track kept Deacs from placing well in the winter competition.

There was no way around it: Coach Jesse Haddock's golf team was loaded with talent. Six lettermen and ten who consistently broke par produced as much optimism among golf followers as had been seen since the Palmer-Patton years. Two former ACC individual winners returned and all save one of the players who had carried the Deacs to a seventh-in-the-nation ranking in 1964. Wake opened with a return to one of the top events in the land, the Florida Invitational Tournament. Jay Sigel, a former national Jaycee champ, won that one last year. Then it was back to the ACC circuit and a run for the championship that had surprisingly eluded them the year before.

Leighton's Expert Coaching Keeps Tennis on the Climb

An optimistic bunch who practiced from fall to spring were the twelve who played for Coach Jim Leighton. The all-veteran squad, with nine seniors in the top ten, hoped to win some of the close ones on experience.

Leighton, in his third year as coach, has raised the calibre of tennis each year. In 1964 his team posted an 8-6 record, the first winning slate in over a decade. This year was no exception. Five returnees had held down single berths in the past and the wealth of depth gave relief in doubles competition. The squad played an 18-match schedule, largest ever for a Deacon tennis team.

INTRAMURALS

Looks like a double play ball.

A hard day in the classroom hasn't helped these aspiring footballers. An attempted pass hits the dirt.

Afternoon Athletes Shine in Intramural Play

Taylor of Kappa Sigma works for a cradle hold on Independent entry Manfred in the 167-pound wrestling class.

Afternoons and evenings from fall to summer found non-varsity athletes competing in a wide variety of intramural sports. The season began with football, Theta Chi taking the campus championship. In the cross-country contest, Rick Hill of Sig Ep took first place for the second straight year.

The Delta Sigs took the campus track title, but their five-year streak of wrestling championships was broken this year by the Kappa Sigs. In basketball, the Sigma Chi's sneaked past the Superjocks in the finals by a close 49-42, to take top honors.

Under the direction of the WRA, girls saw an athletic year with Ginger Brunsey's team and Babcock B taking the basketball championships and Cathy Wood's team placing first in the volleyball open tournament.

Lettermen Find Haven In Huffman

The main floor of Huffman Dorm is a haven where all independent men who have earned their athletic letter may join in bull sessions on "who missed that key tackle" or with the perennial crowd in front of the color television. In their more serious moments Monogram Club members donate to the Olympic fund and sponsor a scholarship for a needy athlete in a minor sport. The Club also organizes the Old Gold and Black football and basketball games and the "Miss Demon Deacon" contest.

Poched above the field in the glass-enclosed pressbox, reporters and photographers from several surrounding states work quickly to meet early deadlines.

There's more than one "team" involved in an athletic venture, as Director Gene Hooks will readily attest. Most in evidence were the cheerleaders—Wake's official emissaries of pep headed by Captain Bob White. Handsprings and grand entrances on fire engines were only a couple of the drastic measures taken to elicit enthusiasm from Deacon fans.

Demon Deacon Hap Bulger and his unicycle were a team of their own in 1964-65. The nimble "Master of Athletic Ceremonies" did everything but pedal up the goalposts to entertain crowds.

On the sidelines of every event, the ever-present press team under the supervision of Information Director "Skooter" Francis recorded the action for radio, TV, and newspaper releases.

Another Kind of Teamwork in Sideline Support

Demon Deacon Hap Bulger takes time out to give a small boy a front-row view.

Wake Forest cheerleaders in the Homecoming Parade were really "fired up" for beating Clemson.

The squad literally bends over backwards to move slow-thawing spectators to cheers.

Betty Lewis, four feet-seven inches of bounce, is the last remaining four-year veteran on the squad.

Athletic Director Gene Hooks oversees the smooth operation of all Wake Forest sports.

A feat of athletic skill is nothing unusual for a man of Ed Christman's energy.

Wake Forest's annual pre-school retreat took on a new perspective this year as it expanded from strictly Baptist to Interdenominational sponsorship. The broadening outlook was also expressed in group discussions which centered around the retreat theme: Modern Man in Quest of a Savior. The rustic setting of Camp Hanes provided an ideal atmosphere of solitude for individual introspection and for reflection on the approaching challenges of the school year.

Rustic Site Encourages Thought, Fellowship

Woodsed banks of a placid lake offer the perfect place for serious thought.

Dynamite both on the field and off, Illinois' Bill Tate inspired fans in such unheard-of feats as getting up at dawn to see the team bus off.

Wake's own attendant in the Harvest Bowl Court was Carole Hendrix, here waving proudly to the fans who watched Wake beat VPI that afternoon in Blacksburg.

The 1964 football squad, backed by their fellow students, give Coach Tate a standing ovation as he steps up to the podium during a chapel pep rally.

Tate's Great "New Look" in Sports and Spirit

Wake Forest trees and buildings grew "streamers" to the tune of the victory bell on several successive weekends this fall.

The new regime meant business.

A mere two weeks after fall classes resumed, Coach Tate's charged-up eleven had won twice as many games as previous teams had captured in the preceding two years.

Virginia, 31-21? VPI, 38-21?

Incredulous Deacon fans sat spellbound by radios from dorm to dorm and gloated over every yard gained as Pic and Mac and Welborn, in two successive journeys to the Old Dominion State, helped themselves to this generous share of "Virginia Hospitality."

And the victories kept on coming.

City Turns Out for First Homecoming Parade

The Marching Deacons are a musical prelude to the parade to come.

For Homecoming '61 the campus hustled with spirit from dawn til dusk til midnight. Wake's first parade streamed down Fourth Street, surprising early morning shoppers who acclaimed the maiden effort. Students, too, looked on—and yawned, remembering a sleepless Friday night of partying, painting and napkin-stuffing.

Early victories from the Deacon eleven brought hordes of proud and anxious alumni home to the stands of Bowman Gray Stadium. An appearance by Lambda Chi protégée Jayne Mansfield was only a warm-up for the main event of the afternoon. When the game got under way, the Baptists tried to “hold those tigers” but the vicious paws of Clemson just weren't taking “no” for an answer.

Floats were a delightful change from the traditional fraternity house decorations. Kappa Alpha took the Greek award while the coeds’ “Lute the Tigers” won it for the Independents.

Deacon Bulger swaps trade secrets with Clemson's Tiger and Southern Gentleman and also pleads for a little mercy in the next half.

Kappa Alpha pledges renew a charge for Dixie, but the 100-year "recess" continues just the same.

Jayne Mansfield gives a few pointers on holding tigers.

Homecoming Crowds Cheer Bain and Berry

Escorted by Bob Leonard, an enraptured Pam Bain smiles regally as "Miss Demon Deacon."

The Deacs tried their best for Homecoming, but even Piccoli's repeated drives weren't enough to prevent a Clemson victory.

Halftime relaxed Deacon fans, who cheered with anticipation as campus beauties rode around the stadium between float entries. Kappa Alpha's promise of victory won the float decoration award while Sigma Chi sweetheart Pam Bain beautified the Homecoming Queen tradition.

In the second half a hopeful comeback was defeated, but Wake Foresters danced away their disappointment to the sounds of Chuck Berry while harboring ever-optimistic Homecoming dreams of better luck next year.

At Memorial Coliseum, Deacon hands and feet were caught up in the dynamic rhythms of Chuck Berry, rock 'n' roll recording star of "Maybellene" fame.

Unfolding New Horizons With Ideas From Abroad

Visitors from foreign countries brought the stimulation of novel ideas to Wake's academic world this year. Typical of the department-sponsored speakers was the German Admiral Friedrich Ruge, who discussed "Rommel and the Invasion of Normandy." The College Union hosted such lively lecturers as Malcolm Muggeridge, the British satirist. A special attraction for ROTC cadets was an exhibition of jungle and guerilla tactics by Special Forces Troops, which students found timely as well as enlightening.

Malcolm Muggeridge charmed an overflow audience with his caustic observation that humor is basically "the discrepancy between what man does and what he says he does." After the lecture students lingered to be further entertained by the Britisher's own superb sense of humor.

As officials hickered over the fine points of parliamentary procedure, "The Prophet" made a sudden and startling appearance before the assembly. Exhorting delegates to repent and be saved, this "messenger from God" was a grim symbol of the extremism that stands as a foe to higher learning.

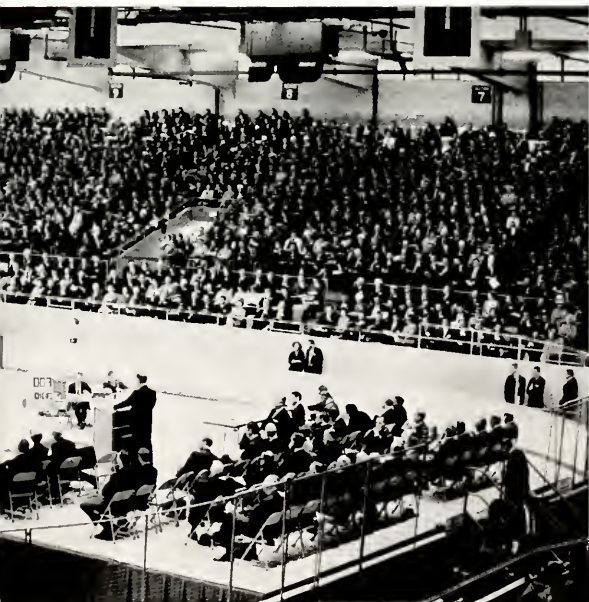

Again in 1964, crushing defeat was delivered to Wake Forest's hope of university status by the N. C. Baptist State Convention. The delegates overwhelmingly rejected two proposals which would have allowed the denomination's seven colleges to receive federal aid for building and to broaden the base of trustee selection. Wake's questions of "why?" and "when?" went still unanswered, and administrators puzzled over this negative dilemma that seemed to leave room for no positive solution.

A Chaplain's consolation can come at strange and ironic times.

Baptist Rebuttal: the Faces of Defeat

Greensboro Coliseum bulged with delegates the day the fateful vote of 1,566 for and 2,247 against the proposals was taken. Scores of vacant seats stared blankly on the following day of Christian business.

President Tribble's face registers the discouragement felt by the College and its friends after seeing a year's work crumble in a single hour.

With a little musical help, Deacons incorporate a new dance—"The Protest."

Demonstrators clustered in front of Reynolds Hall cheer the President's speech, showing their willingness to unite in reaction.

PRESIDENT TRIBBLE: "One way or another, we shall move out into the future."

Backed by Chaplain Hollingsworth and—in spirit—the entire student body, President Tribble expresses his determination that Wals Forest shall not accept defeat and stagnation.

The Flare of Defiance as Hopes Go Up in Smoke

The stubborn blindness of the majority to the needs of higher education created a feeling of helpless frustration on campus. After the final, fatal vote was taken, it didn't take long for reaction to erupt. Students left their radios and gathered on the Plaza; by dinnertime the crowd in front of Reynolda Hall was making its disgust painfully clear. Music, chanting, and Baptist-denounced dancing were momentarily hushed by the valiant figure of President Tribble, who promised progress this time no matter what the cost.

A fiery, home-made cross sizzles into ashes while chants of disgust echo on the Plaza.

Break the Ice at Midwinters 1964*

The Christmas spirit moved all ten fraternities to "peaceful coexistence" in the smoke-filled Armoxy.

Hmm . . . Some things really do go better with Coke.

A greek and date put monkeys to shame.

The African "Beatles" demand equal time.

Even mouth-to-ear communication is barely audible above the combo's blare.

Midwinters came close to the Christmas holidays and fraternity men found a way to make it known that they were doubly enjoying themselves. As early as November campus twisters looked forward to hearing Mary Wells' sultry voice. Instead, a lady friend of the "Zodiacs" walked, talked, and fainted for $2,500 worth of Christmas cheer. IFC weekenders are conditioned to such entertainment emergencies, however, and managed to drown their discontent in the rhythms of Maurice Williams and Dee Clark.

A teddy bear that brings an appreciative smile to such a pretty face makes giving the warmest feeling.

Sister Martin discusses the results of Santa Claus with eight-year-old Goldie beneath the towering tree in the gym lobby.

Despite the unrelenting demand of academic work, students eagerly took time out to express the Yuletide spirit at the annual Student Government party for under-privileged children.

Lambda Chis, aided by the societies, approached the season somewhat uniquely by scrubbing, feeding, and providing homes for the city's "orphaned" dogs, showing that at a time like Christmas man can turn out to be "dog's best friend."

One privileged pooch is given the ultimate in modern dog-grooming—the electric hairdryer—while his less-fortunate canine companion receives the old manual treatment.

Happiness is, indeed, a warm puppy.

CU Ski Weekend Has Its Ups and Downs

Eighty Deacon souls weary of traveling on the level found relief -of a sort- at Blowing Rock's Ski Lodge during the weekend of February 20-21. Temperate weather was no obstacle; snow-making machines managed to cover both beginner and intermediate slopes with enough slippery stuff to down over-eager novices. The only restaurants open for business were blocks away from the Appalachian Motel, but skiers found the brisk walk a good way to work out stiff muscles. A jovial bus driver, refreshing mountain air, and a combo party on Saturday night combined to make it one CU trip worth repeating.

The two-rope lift to the top of the slope made the "uphill climb" the easier half of the bargain...

... Getting back down again was the tricky part.

The fun-pan led Ski Lodge featured a dance on Saturday night with the "R-Dolls" furnishing authentic alpine entertainment.

This first annual CU-sponsored weekend drew skiers with varying levels of stability—from the snowy-seated beginner to the wobbly-kneed intermediate to the nimble expert.

The gala air of the engagement toast is an ironic contrast to the grim revelations soon to follow.

“Inspector” Delves Into Meaning of Guilt

Susan Isby's face mirrors the tragedy of the situation as the suicidal death of the young factory worker is unfolded to her by the methodical Inspector, Dennis Sayers.

The art of timing: Leland Cox's weighty pause accentuates the drama of his encounter with the tenacious Inspector.

The efforts of Danny Walls and Charlotte Tomlinson are typical of the untiring stage crews who worked long hours behind the scenes to insure "The Inspector's" smooth production.

For its third production of the year, Wake's College Theatre presented J. B. Priestley's "An Inspector Calls." To focus audience attention on the situation rather than on the characters, Director Walton experimented with a thin cloth scrim between the audience and the Arena stage. The drama's plot revolves around the Birling family and its members' reactions to the suicidal death of a young girl. The Inspector's incessant probing finds a skeleton in each of their private closets, forcing them to face the injustice of their own selfish action. The play deals with the human conscience and asserts, like the Biblical story of Cain and Abel, that we are indeed "our brothers' keepers."

Ian and Sylvia sang in the folk idiom of their native Canada.

Miriam Makeba's famous "Click Song" was a favorite with the West Chapel audience.

African rhythms, first-rate folksinging, and internationally known musicians were made available to both students and townspeople through the College Union and the College Artists Series. The first performers to appear this year were Ian and Sylvia, the Canadian folksingers. The strange and sometimes startling sounds of African vocalist Miriam Makeba brought a different kind of entertainment to the campus. In a more classical vein were the performances of talented violinist Charles Tregno and keyboard virtuoso Roger Williams.

Arts lovers enjoyed the classical repertoire of Artist Series violinist Charles Tregar.

Two earnest admirers greet the young musician backstage.

CHALLENGE '65 Debuts With "World of American Negro"

With the conviction that the students of Wake Forest should take an active interest in the events of our day and the motives behind them, CHALLENGE '65 was conceived. Dedicating their efforts to Wake's search for intellectual freedom, Director Buzz Hoff and his staff chose a pertinent topic "The Emerging World of the American Negro" and began soliciting the participation of a collection of experts. From March 11-13 Deacons, townspeople and delegates from 68 other campuses heard lectures and panel discussions by such individuals as James Farmer, Ned Kenworthy, and Hodding Carter, III. Plans are for CHALLENGE to become a bi-annual tradition continuing to provide students the rare materials of well-informed opinion.

CHALLENGE '65 STAFF: C. Peacock, G. Davidson, D. Cowan, C. Sweigart, Director D. Hoff, C. Morris, J. Shertzer, D. Haver, V. This, P. Ellis, M. Andrew, R. Rentz.

First-day confusion centered around the East Lounge, where 400 delegates from other schools filtered in to register for the three days of CHALLENGE activities.

Known nationally as an artist of social protest, folksinger Joan Baez was the entertainment highlight of CHALLENGE '65. She held a brief press conference in her dressing-room Friday night before her "standing-room-only" concert in Wait Chapel.

Congress of Racial Equality Director James Farmer spoke at a banquet held in his honor Friday night. Many considered it the most significant single address of the Symposium.

A panel discussion on "The Negro and Justice" featured Gerald Davidson, Associate Director of CHALLENGE '65, moderator Joel Fleischman, noted N. C. attorney, and Robert L. Carter, General Counsel for the NAACP.

Donna Ingalls entertains Deacs with his wide repertoire of folk songs at a "Bring Your Own Blanket" hootenanny behind Reynolda Hall.

Sounds of the Platters' many Golden Hits filled Wait Chapel at the concert presented Friday night.

Typical of the Magnolia Festival's evolution toward "big-weekend" status was a concert by the Platters, one of the most prominent groups to appear at Wake Forest this year.

Magnolia Festival Swings Into Spring With Big-Name Sounds in Music

Warm weather and big sounds in musical entertainment gave a new look to Wake's traditional Magnolia Weekend. Under the new sponsorship of the College Union, varied events included an address by Dr. Frank Graham of the United Nations and a Saturday-afternoon baseball game.

Although early April was too soon for Wake's famous magnolias, Reynolda Gardens blossomed with tulips and jonquils and the ten beauties of the Magnolia Court.

Surrounded by members of her court, Magnolia Queen Sharon Bain and her escort lead off the first dance following their presentation.

Climaxing the weekend was the Magnolia Ball, held at the new Gold Leaf Supper Club and featuring the big-band music of the Jimmy Dancy Orchestra.

The Wake Forest Stage Band closed the festivities on a musical note with a Sunday-afternoon concert in Reynolda Lounge.

Success in the "Stuff the Car" contest depends on a "claw" sisterhood. Little did the girls suspect that nearby in the trunk of the car the Sigs' battle ammunition was carefully concealed.

The spring phenomenon which may have appeared as ostentatious boy-chasing to the naïve was in actuality the society girls' pursuit of Sigma Chi derbies. It was all part of that larger institution, Derby Day, sponsored by Delta Nu Chapter in conjunction with the five societies. An afternoon of events such as ice-sitting and car-packing gave the girls a chance to show their true societal love. After the awards presentation, the inevitable "Sig Storm Troops" took over the show, showering eggs, flour, and shaving cream upon the unsuspecting girls, who had thought the fun was over. Though a society got the trophy, Sigma Chi was the real winner.

A Look Across the Threshold To What Lies Beyond

A wife and family have joined in this med student's eight-year struggle for his professional degree.

The graduating senior leaves behind an intellectual and cultural richness he may never again find in his daily struggles to earn a living and raise a family. The future's challenge is a stiff one: as a novice in world of political fiction, Civil Rights turmoil, and military clashes, the young adult is understandably awed. How well he grapples with his world may depend on the strength built through his academic encounters: if he has spent well his time at Wake Forest, then he will have more to show for his four college years than a sheepskin.

For both men and women graduates, the diploma may mean better opportunities in government and industry.

From Solitude, the Insight To Strengthen Society

When the inevitable Quiet Hour arrives, after the clinking of dishes and silver what then? Being alone need not mean loneliness: "Solitude," maintained Dryden, "is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character." Indeed, the emergence of individual thought from isolation is where the real educational process begins. And whether his search is for career, companion, or a chance to help out, the lucky student will eventually find that rare comprehension of himself and his place in the order of things.

Deacon singers, writers, artists and thinkers suddenly found a place of their own when the Student Government opened its Coffee Shop in the attic of the Library. The red-and-blue-lit atmosphere stimulated a variety of creative expression from Elizabethan lyrics to forecasts on Viet Nam. Both students and professors found that an informal evening spent enjoying a good conversation over a good cup of coffee made worthwhile the long trudge. . . .

. . . Eight Stories Up for the Climate of Individuality

The individuals of the class emerged more impressively than ever in 1965 each with the certain uniqueness that set him apart. Ten years from now, this year's Seniors will still remember the ones who rode a unicycle and played Santa Claus and rushed for a total of 1,044 yards.

LAW REVIEW EDITORS: W. Davis, J. Van Camp, G. Davis, J. Radzius, C. Wray.

Law Review

The Wake Forest Intramural Law Review was established this year to allow students an opportunity for creative expression. The publication, designed as an outlet for articles written by students and professors, will be sent out to alumni and other Schools of Law throughout the state, as well as to North Carolina lawyers.

Although this is The Law Review's first year of publication, its Editors anticipate expansion in future years to greater benefit of attorneys and law students alike. Hopes are that the Wake Forest publication will eventually be a bound volume which will occupy a place of respect among other volumes of its kind in the profession.

Miss Brenda Warren

Timberlake Chapter enjoyed another successful season of fraternal and professional life. Professionally, Phi Alpha Delta participated in the annual district conclave in Durham, and its local activities included dinner-meetings with addresses by noted judges and attorneys. The brothers were also involved in extra-curriculars such as the Jurist and the Student Bar Association with Brother Hinton as President.

Socially, the chapter's program was highlighted by the Spring Banquet, where a prominent legislator was heard and awards were presented to the Outstanding Brother and the Fraternity Sweetheart.

Mrs. Lawana Ford

Phi Delta Phi was founded at the University of Michigan in 1869 and is the oldest professional fraternity in America. Ruffin Inn at Wake Forest was chartered in 1947.

The brothers enjoyed an outstanding year, with 94% achieving success on the 1964 State Bar Examinations. A joint initiation ceremony was held before the North Carolina Supreme Court with Phi Delta Phi chapters from Duke and Carolina. This was followed by a cocktail party, banquet and dance in Raleigh.

OFFICERS: William Crews, Eschequer; Larry Ford, Magister; Namon Daughtry, Secretary; John Newitt, Historian.

The laboratory becomes a "second home" for graduate students in the sciences.

*Winston-Salem lies at 36 degrees N. latitude and 80 degrees W. longitude, in the heart of tobacco country.
Judges called it an "All-American" city; a hundred and twenty-five thousand Twin Citians call it home. Each year twenty-five hundred Deacons become a part of this rapidly-expanding COMMUNITY.*

An old friend to Business Manager Robin Reynolds is the station on the corner, where "Service Is Our Business" proves no idle boast. She stops by to make sure the "Black Knightie" is in top shape before setting out on an afternoon of ad-selling to Twin City merchants.

From the cobblestone walks of historic Old Salem to the tree-shaded boulevards of the northwest suburbs, Winston-Salem is a city that reflects a bustling blend of old and new. Not many blocks from the eighteenth-century Moravian teapot, the skeleton of the new Wachovia Building already soars above the highest structure in town. Each year, Wake Forest students patronize the community's businesses, benefiting in return from such advantages as a Student Discount Service.

that you are graduating into one of the most promising areas of the nation? A recent urban research study forecasts "a linear city" for the 300 miles stretching through the industrial Carolinas. Here, in the 20,000 square miles served by Duke Power, scores of thriving towns connect busy cities. Research centers, colleges and universities, and hundreds of industries thrive.

Here in the Carolinas Crescent, there is real challenge and opportunity. There is a place for you to fill, a job for you to do, in an exciting future that begins—right now.

FREEDOM TO LEARN

Certainly one of the most precious privileges we enjoy in this free society is the right to learn . . . to choose the institution that best fits our needs and desires, and the subjects that interest us most.

To ask questions, and seek answers.

To read, study, and probe for the great truths.

And like most privileges, this one carries a responsibility . . . the responsibility to use it wisely.

P. H. Hanes Knitting Company congratulates you, the young men and women who are devoting important years of your lives to learning.

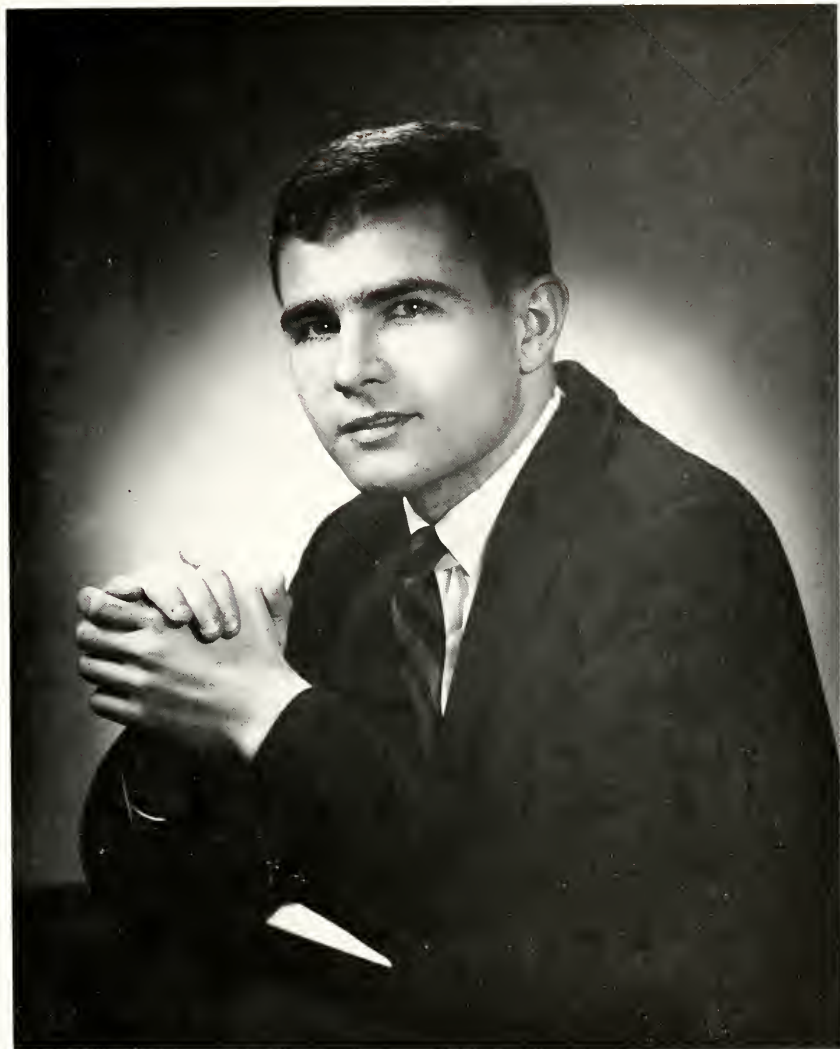

We know your lives will be richer for it, and your service to mankind more complete.

May each of you enjoy the heights of success in your chosen career.

The 1965 HOWLER was printed by the letterpress process by Edwards & Broughton Company in Raleigh, North Carolina. All engravings for the book were produced in Chicago by Jahn & Ollier Engraving Company. The paper is 100 lb. weight double-coated enamel. The type face for body copy, captions, and page numbers is Baskerville. All display heads are Century Bold Italic. This is the sixty-second edition of the HOWLER and contains 304 pages.

*A Look
At the HOWLER'S Family Tree . . .*

The great-granddaddy of all Wake publications was an elm tree that grew beside a well on the Old Wake Forest campus. Before the advent of indoor plumbing, the boys drew their water at this well each evening and the tree became a handy place to tack up articles, messages, and a monthly bulletin depicting campus activities. Gradually, it came to be known as the "Howler Tree." Then, in 1905, the notes were transferred to a less weatherbeaten, more durable medium—and the HOWLER as we know it was born. That first issue was dedicated to the old elm that named it.

Yearbooks have come a long way since then, but their need for durability against the "weatherbeating" of time remains the same. We realize that the real test of this year's HOWLER will not come this June, or next June, or even June 1967. The real test will come twenty years from now, if a graying housewife or a paunchy businessman can take his '65 HOWLER off a dusty shelf and leaf through its pages once more and say, "Hey, remember all that uproar about Civil Rights back then?" or "Boy, that really was a good year for football," or "Those were the good old days—when we would hike up eight stories just for a cup of coffee." Because unless a yearbook portrays the real people and the real places and the real events it sets out to portray, it's dead before it ever gets off the presses.

So with this stringent principle as our unofficial motto in '65, we set out to portray the real Wake Forest people and the real world that surrounds them. And we had the finest of assistance—from Ralph Van Dyke of J & O, who always "psyched us up"; from Joe Phelps of E & B, who always calmed us down; and from our adviser, Dean Wilson, who always managed to smooth our giant-overwhelming dilemmas down to the funny little nothings that they invariably were.

Our quest for photographs—exactly the right photographs—took us inside mail boxes and under rat cages, from the top of the Zinzendorf Hotel to the bottom of Blowing Rock ski slopes and right into Joan Baez's dressing room. Sources for the '65 HOWLER's 658 pictures ranged from NASA all the way down to the greenest freshman photographer—and each picture a story in itself. There was inscrutable Frank Jones, who inevitably "grossed us out" but once bought us all eclairs; there was irrepressible Dick Radford, who broke us up with his classic "Only flash bulbs and beer, Sir!"; and there was impossible Bill Vernor, who was getting some great angles until the goalpost he was perched on was torn down by ecstatic fans at the Duke game.

And the list goes on and on. But we had to stop somewhere, and page 304 snuck up on us suddenly one day, from out of a typewriter or behind a filing cabinet or somewhere. People ask us now, "Is it finished?" and we say Yes, but we know it hasn't really even begun yet. It will begin when the first box is opened and the first book is handed across the table and the first page turned. And it will continue in June 1967 or June 1987, when the turning of the same pages may stir up a new insight or an old memory again. Hopefully, in fact, the '65 HOWLER won't ever be really "finished."

In a sense, this year's issue, too, is dedicated to that old "Howler Tree" that started it all. It had to be chopped down in 1947—for as Pub Row's own Dr. Folk put it, "Well, you know, elm trees don't live forever . . ."

Or maybe they don't ever really die.
